Fangs of Justice: The Vampire Night Court

MR. RENFIELD

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I can see you're all impressed with the prosecution's defense of the supposed victims. Heck, I'm impressed! But do you realize what she actually said? She said that the alleged victims were "simply" looking for a bathroom. Simply? They were simply? Why would she use the word "simply?" It's very simple. You see, the word "simply" makes it sound like an everyday common occurrence. A simple explanation for a simple straightforward task that the common citizen would perform when going about his normal, ordinary, commonplace daily schedule. Something you, yourself, might "simply" do. Let's test that word out on the rest of their agenda, shall we? They "simply" stole a case of toilet paper from their parents' underground storage bunker. They then "simply" stopped for Big Gulps and then drove to the nearest Egyptian archeological excavation site. They "simply" T-P-ed the pyramids. They "simply" used the entire case of toilet paper but it "simply" wasn't enough to cover said pyramids. They "simply" entered the ancient burial site in search of a bathroom to find more. They "simply" found some. They "simply" began to unravel it, awakening a 4,000 year old mummy and "simply" triggering a deadly curse. Throughout the course of this trial, you're going to hear a lot of fancy terms thrown out by the prosecuting team, like "radical mummy extremist," but these terms will "simply" not be able to divert your attention from the fact that Imotep, otherwise known as "The Mummy," is not guilty. Thank you.

OFFICER CHERSTI

Hello, my name is Officer Shhhersti. I know it's spelled with a C-H, but it's pronounced Shhhersti. It's like when you fill up your Chevrolet at the Chevron station. Shhhevrolet, Shhhevron, Shhhersti. All C-H words. Everyone got it? Good. Now, I am happy to be here at career day. I've been asked to speak to you about what it's like to be a cop. Well, let me tell ya, it's not easy. They make us pay for our uniform and our gun. And guns aren't shhheap. In fact, they're the opposite of shhheap, they're expensive. Dating is also difficult. The guy always thinks I'm gonna pull him over for speeding. And I'm like, "hurry up, or we'll be late for the choh." And he's like, "the what?" And I'm like, "the choh! The picture choh!?" Deciding on a movie is always confusing. I'm like, "Let's watch one of the Treks." And he's like, "I'm not really a sci-fi fan." And I'm like, "I'm not either. That's why I suggested one of the Treks." And he's like, "Star Shrek is ultra science fiction." And I'm like, "Star Shrack? I'm talking about Trek! You know, the green ogre with the talking donkey?! (Imitating Donkey) 'Trek! Trek! I'm a donkey, Trek!'" And he's like, "Oh, you mean Trek!" And I'm like, "No, not Shrack. I don't wanna watch Star Shrack." And he's like, "It's not Star Shrack, it's Star Shreck." And I'm like, "Whatever, I just don't like Shooey." And he's like, "Shooey? What's Shooey?" And I'm like, "You know, Shoobacca?" And he's like, "That's Star Wars, not Star Shrack, I mean Shreck." Anywho, it's tough being a cop.

"It was such a fun project. The students loved every step from our first read through. The characters are fabulous. It's a perfect class project with a terrific acting opportunity for each student!"

--Melanie Day, Box Elder High School, Brigham City, UT

"So many great character parts for the students. It's a great project to get everyone involved, and so much fun to perform!"

--Allen Smith, Rocky Mountain Jr. High, West Haven, UT
